Leader in Me Lessons:

Habit 4 is "Think Win-Win." It teaches us to be looking for solutions where everyone benefits. Instead of competing or trying to get our own way, we should work together, listen to others, and find choices that make all sides feel respected and successful. It builds trust, kindness, and teamwork in any situation.

Habit 5 is "Seek First to Understand, Then to Be Understood." It teaches the importance of listening carefully before responding. We must consider others' feelings and perspectives first, which helps us communicate respectfully, solve problems calmly, and build stronger relationships at school, work and home.
